INTRODUCTION

The year 2011 saw the launching of our new M.A. programme. Together with the B.A. programme, which was started in October 2008, it will gradually replace the old Magister curriculum. The new M.A. programme, like the old Magister curriculum, provides a solid grounding in Social and Cultural Anthropology. Students studying for this degree should be able to pursue professional careers in development work, broadcasting and the media, journalism and publishing, public relations, social services and other fields, or to pursue careers in teaching and research in university and museum settings.

The following overview highlights other events that marked the past year at our Department in various ways:

In October, Matthias Krings was appointed a full university professor.

In 2011, the department celebrated Thomas Bierschenk's 60th birthday. A Festschrift entitled Auf dem Boden der Tatsachen: Festschrift für Thomas Bierschenk and edited by Eva Spies and Nikolaus Schareika (Göttingen) was presented to Thomas Bierschenk on 18th June, during the 4th European Conference of African Studies in Uppsala/Sweden. Many of his friends and colleagues came to the reception to celebrate his birthday as well as the book launch with him.

In September 2011, several members of the department were elected to the Board of Directors of the German Anthropological Association (GAA – Deutsche Gesellschaft für Völkerkunde, DGV). Carola Lentz was elected President, Matthias Krings was elected Vice-President, and Ute Rösenthaler was elected Treasurer of the GAA. The members of the Board of Directors function as convenors of the next biennial conference of the GAA, which will take place in October 2013. Anna-Maria Brandstetter, Hauke Dorsch and Eva Spies constitute the Advisory Board of the GAA; Silja Thomas is administrator of the GAA.

The department has been fortunate to welcome several new colleagues in 2011: In June, Helmut Asche, a leading economist of Africa, was appointed a 'Honorarprofessor' (honorary professor) at the department. In November, Thorolf Lipp was appointed a visiting professor (Gastdozent) of the Gutenberg Teaching Council. Andrea Graham has joined the department's general office (Sekretariat). The department's 'Studienbüro' for the administration of B.A. and M.A. courses and examinations has been expanded. Our new colleague Elke Rössler now administers the courses, whereas Cristina Gall is responsible for the administration of the ever-growing number of examinations.

Having returned from substitute professorships in Halle-Wittenberg and Zurich respectively, which she had held for three semesters, Katja Werthmann left the department at the end of the year to take up a permanent position as senior lecturer at the Department of Cultural Anthropology and Ethnology, University of Uppsala/Sweden. Uta Reuster-Jahn, who left the department in January 2011, is now a lecturer in Swahili at the University of Hamburg. Other colleagues have changed their functions but remain in the department: Cassis Kilian has completed her Ph.D. research. Gabriel Hacke is continuing his Ph.D. research. Godwin Kornes and Andrea Noll are also continuing their Ph.D. research, funded by scholarships from the Scholarship Foundation Rhineland-Palatinate and the German Academic Exchange Service, DAAD, respectively.

A new research project was launched in January 2011, "Significations of Oil and Social Change in Niger and Chad: An Anthropological Cooperative Research Project on Technologies and Processes of Creative Adaptation in Relation to African Oil Production". This project, which is funded by the DFG till 2014, is directed by Andrea Behrends (Halle), Nikolaus Schareika (Göttingen), and Thomas Bierschenk. Two research projects have been granted extensions: The project "States at Work", directed by Thomas Bierschenk and Mahaman Tidjani Alou (Niamey/Niger) and funded by the Volkswagen Foundation, till December 2012 and the project "The Poetics and Politics of National Commemoration in Africa", directed by Carola Lentz and funded by the programme PRO Geistes- und Sozialwissenschaften 2015, JGU, till November 2012. Two research projects were successfully terminated in 2011: The project "The Negotiation of Culture: Video Films and Bongo Flava Music in Tanzania", directed by Matthias Krings and funded by the DFG, and the project "Religious Encounters in Madagascar and the Differentiation of Modernity", directed by Eva Spies and funded by the Forschungsfond of the JGU.

In June, Anna-Maria Brandstetter was appointed coordinator of the partnership between the National University of Rwanda in Butare and the JGU until March 2013. Together with the Rwandan partners she will evaluate the current cooperation and put forward a proposal how the cooperation could be carried on and developed further.

In 2006, the Sulzmann Foundation (JGU) established the Sulzmann Award, which is granted annually to students of the department who have written outstanding Master's or Ph.D. theses on Sub-Saharan Africa. In 2011 the jury decided to share the award between Cassis Kilian and Annika Witte. Cassis Kilian's Ph.D. thesis, which is entitled "Schwarz besetzt: Planspiele im afrikanischen Film" and which was supervised by Matthias Krings, is based on research carried out in the context of the research project "White Roles' in African Film: On the Intercultural Negotiation of Identities". Annika Witte's M.A. thesis, which is entitled "Grauzonen. Funktionsweisen der Beniner Polizei und ihr Verhältnis zur Bevölkerung" and which was supervised by Thomas Bierschenk, is based on fieldwork in Benin carried out in the context of the research project "States at Work".

The department congratulates former Ph.D. student Nassirou Bako-Arifari, who was appointed Minister of Foreign Affairs of his home country, the Republic of Benin. Anthropology student Ellen Hoffers received a 'special recognition' during the 2011 award of the Afrika-Journalistenpreis of the Bayreuth International Graduate School of African Studies (BIGSAS) for her essay entitled "Afrika in unseren Köpfen". The essay was published online on the website of the German TV station ARD (<http://www.ard.de/kultur/archiv/afrika/afrika-unabhaengigkeit/-/id=1416066/nid=1416066/did=1414054/w2jqp>). In April 2011, Anthropology student Elena Hofferberth participated in the world's biggest simulation of the United Nations in New York, a conference that annually brings together over 5,000 young people from around the world to discuss diverse issues of international relations.

Among the visitors to the Department we were especially honoured to receive Marianne Grosse, Head of the "Dezernat für Bauen, Denkmalpflege und Kultur (Dezernat VI)" (Department of Building, the Preservation of Monuments and Historic Buildings, and Culture) of the City of Mainz.

ABOUT THE DEPARTMENT OF ANTHROPOLOGY AND AFRICAN STUDIES

The Department of Anthropology and African Studies at the JGU is an interdisciplinary institution which covers a broad spectrum in both research and teaching activities. These include classical topics in anthropology but also topics such as the politics and sociology of development, modern popular culture (particularly literature, music, theatre and film), as well as the languages of Africa.

The department's academic staff includes four full professors:

- THOMAS BIERSCHENK (CULTURES AND SOCIETIES OF AFRICA)
Staff in 2011: Sarah Fichtner and Eva Spies
- RAIMUND KASTENHOLZ (AFRICAN LANGUAGE STUDIES)
Staff in 2011: Raija Kramer and Holger Tröbs
- MATTHIAS KRINGS (ANTHROPOLOGY AND AFRICAN POPULAR CULTURE)
Staff in 2011: Hauke Dorsch and Cassis Kilian
- CAROLA LENTZ (ANTHROPOLOGY)
Staff in 2011: Anna-Maria Brandstetter, Jan Budniok, Godwin Kornes, Andrea Noll, Anja Oed and Katja Werthmann

Further staff are employed in a number of research projects.

The department offers degrees at the BACHELOR OF ARTS (B.A.), MASTERS (M.A.), and PH.D. levels. The focus of the curriculum and research programme rests on modern Africa. Teaching and research are going hand in hand, and advanced students are actively involved in research projects.

In all these endeavours collaboration with African colleagues plays a central role. The department publishes the series MAINZER BEITRÄGE ZUR AFRIKAFORSCHUNG (editors: Thomas Bierschenk, Anna-Maria Brandstetter, Raimund Kastenholz, Matthias Krings and Carola Lentz. Cologne: Rüdiger Köppe). In 2011, two new volumes were published:

- Nikolaus Schareika, Eva Spies and Pierre-Yves Le Meur (eds.), Auf dem Boden der Tatsachen: Festschrift für Thomas Bierschenk (Mainzer Beiträge zur Afrikaforschung, 28)
- Thomas Bierschenk and Eva Spies (eds.), 50 Jahre Unabhängigkeit in Afrika – Kontinuitäten, Brüche, Perspektiven. (Mainzer Beiträge zur Afrikaforschung, 29)

Bibliographic information on all titles of the series can be found online at http://www.ifeas.uni-mainz.de/zeitschriften/Mainzer\_bei.html or at http://www.koeppe.de/reihen\_details.php?id=41.

Furthermore, the department publishes an online series of working papers, ARBEITSPAPIERE DES INSTITUTS FÜR ETHNOLOGIE UND AFRIKASTUDIEN DER JOHANNES GUTENBERG-UNIVERSITÄT MAINZ / WORKING PAPERS OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ANTHROPOLOGY AND AFRICAN STUDIES OF THE JOHANNES GUTENBERG UNIVERSITY OF MAINZ (managing editor: Eva Spies). In 2011, eight new working papers (nos. 124-131) were published (<http://www.ifeas.uni-mainz.de/workingpapers/Arbeitspapiere.html>).

The department hosts the online journal SWAHILI FORUM (editors: Rose Marie Beck, Maud Devos, Lutz Diegner, Uta Reuster-Jahn, Clarissa Vierke) (<http://www.ifeas.uni-mainz.de/SwaFo>).

The department's facilities include a DEPARTMENTAL LIBRARY (Institutsbibliothek), which complements the holdings of the University Library, as well as the JAHN LIBRARY FOR AFRICAN LITERATURES (Jahn-Bibliothek für afrikanische Literaturen), the AFRICAN MUSIC ARCHIVES (Archiv für die Musik Afrikas), and the ETHNOGRAPHIC STUDY COLLECTION (Ethnographische Studiensammlung).

DEPARTMENTAL LIBRARY

The departmental library comprises approximately 50,000 volumes as well as about 70 journals. A video archive comprising ethnographic films, documentaries on African cultures and societies and on current events in the region as well as music clips and African films is an additional resource available to students, researchers and faculty.

THE JAHN LIBRARY FOR AFRICAN LITERATURES

The Jahn Library (<http://www.jahn-bibliothek.ifeas.uni-mainz.de>), headed by Anja Oed, is one of the earliest and most comprehensive research facilities for African literatures in Europe and beyond. Its collection comprises creative writing from Africa in more than eighty languages, including classics in African literatures as well as works by less well-known writers and locally produced literary works. The collection also holds translations, film adaptations of literary works and audiobooks, as well as a large number of critical sources and academic journals.

About every four years, the Jahn Library organises an International Janheinz Jahn Symposium focusing on a central issue in African literary studies. The 10th Janheinz Jahn Symposium will take place in 2012 on “The Violated City: Urban Dystopias in 21st-Century African Literature”; the call for papers has been published on the Jahn Library’s website. The symposium will be held in conjunction with the Africa-Europe Group for Interdisciplinary Studies as an AEGIS Thematic Conference.

Theatre: A Bibliography of Primary and Secondary Sources” by James Gibbs.

A showcase at the entrance to the Jahn library displays treasures from the collection. In 2011, the series of showcase displays featuring the literary work of African writers in the 21st century was continued with displays on Emmanuel B. Dongala, Meja Mwangi, Aminatta Forna, Sefi Atta and Paulina Chiziane.

A new area on the Jahn Library’s website has been created to tie in with Janheinz Jahn’s pioneering bibliographic work on African literatures. A start was made in November 2011 with the publication of a bibliography by Ranka Primorac (Southampton), “An Overshadowed Literature: Mapping the Field. A Bibliography of Zambia’s Literature in English”. The publication was celebrated with an “Evening of Zambian Literature” on 15th November, featuring a lecture by Ranka Primorac herself as well as a reading by Zambian writer Namwali Serpell. In the meantime, a second bibliography has been published, “Ghanaian

AFRICAN MUSIC ARCHIVES (AMA)

The African Music Archives (<http://www.ama.ifeas.uni-mainz.de>) was established in 1991. Its collection focuses primarily on popular music from Sub-Saharan Africa, a musical genre underrepresented in collections elsewhere, but it also includes recordings of 'traditional' music. Material is available on different media such as shellac and vinyl records, CDs and DVDs, VHS and audio cassettes. Recordings from Ethiopia, Cameroon, the Republic of the Congo and the DR Congo, Ghana, Kenya, Nigeria and Tanzania are well represented. However, the AMA collects music from every African country. Finally, journal articles, reports, interviews, and reviews published in both the African and European popular press are available for research.

After re-opening the AMA in 2010, Hauke Dorsch, the Archives' new director, focused on the re-organisation of the collection, that is, its cataloguing and digitisation. Further steps have been undertaken to reach out to the scientific community to assure the Archives' visibility locally and internationally. This includes the co-operation with the ASC Leiden, which resulted in a workshop at ELIAS/ECAS 2011 in Uppsala, in giving a number of interviews for newspapers, local radio and TV stations and an African art website, writing press articles, launching a Facebook site and updating the Archives' website. Finally, the AMA was re-integrated into the curriculum of the department by offering courses on African music and by inviting students to use the AMA's facilities.

The AMA organised workshops on media programmes, introductions to archival research, and a visit to a local radio station for students. In order to be more visible on campus the AMA launched an events series called "Das AMA stellt sich vor" (The AMA introduces itself).

Apart from a number of scholars (many of them from Gießen University), some musicians, including Julien Babinga, Aziz Kuyateh, Pa Jobarteh and Karamo Kuyateh, used the Archives as a source of information and inspiration.

ETHNOGRAPHIC COLLECTION

The department's ethnographic collection was started in 1950 by Dr. Erika Sulzmann, who, in 1948, became the first lecturer in Anthropology at the newly established Institut für Völkerkunde at the JGU and immediately began to build up an ethnographic collection. From 1951 to 1954 she spent more than two years in the Belgian Congo (now Democratic Republic of Congo) and carried out fieldwork among the Ekonda and Bolia in the equatorial rainforest. She collected more than 500 objects, which formed the original core of the department's holdings, and constantly enlarged the collection during her further research trips to the Congo between 1956 and 1980.

Today the collection encompasses about 3,200 objects, mainly from Central and West Africa, but also from Australia, Papua New Guinea and the South Pacific. Since 1992 Anna-Maria Brandstetter has been the collection's curator.

The collection's items are used in teaching. Students learn how to conserve items and how to study them properly. The year 2011 was marked by various activities addressed to a wider public. The collection participated in the Mainz Art Biennial "3xklingeln" with the exhibition "Treasures from Africa and Oceania" (see chapter "Activities"). Several objects from the collection were on loan to different exhibitions. First, in "Wunderkammer", an installation realised by M.A. students from the University of Applied Sciences, Mainz, as part of the project "skop: Kommunikationslabor für Wissenschaft und Gestaltung" (14th April – 30th June 2011). Two other skop projects – "Archives and Collections" (a photo exhibition) and "Graphic Abstracts" (an edition of ten posters about scientific finds) – were realised in cooperation with the collection's curator (skop.gutenberg-intermedia.de). Second, in the historical exhibition "vorbildlich", featuring the careers of 17 female scholars from the JGU (14th November 2011 – 15th February 2012), with portraits of three anthropologists who worked in the department: Elisabeth Grohs, Ulla Schild and Erika Sulzmann. The biographical presentations were complemented by exhibits, collected by Elisabeth Grohs and Erika Sulzmann during their fieldwork in Tanzania and the Congo (Kinshasa) respectively. Third, in the exhibition "bunt!? Farbwelten erleben!", curated by Nicole Fischer at the Museum of Natural History in Mainz (18th November 2011 – 1st July 2012); an internship at the Museum enabled Anthropology and African Studies student Daniel Polte to get hands-on experience presenting ethnographic objects to a broader public.

RESEARCH PROJECTS

Significations of oil and social change in Niger and Chad

An anthropological cooperative research project on technologies and processes of creative adaptation in relation to African oil production

Project of the DFG Priority Programme 1448 "Adaptation and Creativity in Africa – Significations and Technologies in the Production of Order and Disorder"

Project directors: Andrea Behrends (Halle), Nikolaus Schareika (Göttingen), Thomas Bierschenk

Cooperation partners in Africa: Centre de Recherche en Anthropologie et Sciences Humaines (CRASH), N'Djamena/Chad: Remadji Hoinathy; Laboratoire d'Études et de Recherches sur les Dynamiques Sociales et le Développement Locale (LASDEL), Niamey/Niger: Mahaman Tidjani Alou, Jean-Pierre Olivier de Sardan, Hadiza Moussa

Duration: March 2011 – February 2013

Funded by the Deutsche Forschungsgemeinschaft (DFG).

<http://www.spp1448.de/projects/oil-and-social-change>

Oil will remain the central carrier of energy in global industry and the provision of services in the foreseeable future. Crude oil is also the basis for uncountable materials and thus essential for modern commodity production. Against the background of finite and – at least in public perception – diminishing reserves, increasing demand in countries like China and India and, connected to that, rising oil prices, hitherto untapped and less lucrative reserves are dramatically rising in significance. The African continent and its coastlines with their enormous potential in oil reserves are now the focus of new explorations and exploitations by multinational and national oil companies. Niger and Chad, landlocked neighbours in the Sahel region, are two of these new petro-states. From a regionally comparative and ethnographically rich perspective, the research project aims to determine which processes of social, political and cultural change – particularly during the early phase – are triggered by oil production and the new flow of oil revenues.

On a theoretical basis, the project aims at adding a decidedly anthropological perspective to the economics and political-science dominated expertise on oil in Africa. In a sense, what we are hoping for is to produce an anthropology of the African oil-based rentier state. To this end, the project will conduct ethnographic long-term studies about social and political practice on the local level as well as processes of signification and the creative adaptation of interpretative and practice-oriented models in relation to oil production.

Global western – intercultural transformations of the American genre par excellence

Project director: Thomas Klein

Duration: July 2010 – June 2013

Funded by the Deutsche Forschungsgemeinschaft (DFG).

<http://www.western-global.de>

The western conveys the core of the North American founding myth like no other film genre. At the same time, the “American film par excellence” (André Bazin) had an immense influence on other national cinemas due to the world-wide distribution of the western. The best-known and already researched variations of the non-US western include European variations of the Western, especially the Italian or so-called Spaghetti-Western and the German screen adaptations of novelist Karl May.

Talk with Thomas Klein (left) during the Wissenschaftsmarkt in Mainz (2009), in the context of the presentation of the Center for Intercultural Studies (ZIS), JGU.

The project “Global Western” expands the analysis of Western transformations. Research in the first phases of the project (2008-2009, financed by the Center of Intercultural Studies (ZIS) and the Förderstufe I of the JGU), has shown that the US-Western and from the 1960s onward the Spaghetti-Western has influenced national cinemas all over the world. That the influence on the European cinema was not limited to Italy, West and East Germany, the international conference “The Western – Intercultural perspectives” (20th – 21st November 2009) did prove. Even in the East European cinemas Westerns were produced with different approaches of transformation.

The project phase funded by the DFG deals with culturally specific transformations of the Western in Mexico, Brazil, Australia and Japan. The focus lies on the Charro-Genre in Mexico, the Cangaceiro-Genre in Brazil, the Bushranger-Genre in Australia and the Samurai Genre in Japan. Methodically the project is based on the semantic/syntactic approach to film genre. The Western as exemplary American cinema will be researched for the ways in which clear cultural transfers are enabled and thereby significant alterations experienced. These changes range across genre-constitutive variables, from base mythologies to the iconography of the Western.

The extension of generic concepts is used in order to introduce transnational and transcultural perspectives by applying the discourse of national cinema and discourses as well as methods of post-colonial studies (i.e., the concept of appropriation). Thus the project can be understood as a pioneering study of a phenomenon of intercultural practice not previously examined in this form.

http://www.ifeas.uni-mainz.de/projekte/StatesatWork\_neu.html

The project analyses the 'real' workings of states and public services, at both the central and local levels, with a focus on two key sectors, education and justice, in four West African countries (Benin, Ghana, Mali, Niger). Its objectives are to contribute to the academic debates on processes of state formation in Africa, and to the debate, among development practitioners, on the role of the state for development, by giving these debates a much firmer empirical grounding than is often the case in the existing literature. The second, related objective is to define public bureaucracies as a legitimate and productive object of anthropological enquiry, without neglecting interdisciplinary approaches combining social anthropology, sociology, political science and law.

On a research policy level, and against the background of existing research networks, the objectives are to promote young (mainly African) researchers at the Ph.D. level; contribute to the development of West African centres of excellence; develop interdisciplinary cooperation between West African scholars of different countries, in particular between Anglophone and Franco-phone countries, on the basis of joint empirical research; strengthen existing cooperative relations between German and African researchers at different levels (senior staff, Ph.D. and M.A. students).

Corruption, support of violent political regimes and protection of neoliberal economic interests – West Africa's police is usually regarded as a dysfunctional state institution, both in popular and scholarly discourses. Representing the state's monopoly on the legitimate use of violence and thus expected to be politically neutral, the police is often criticized as institutionally not autonomous. Solid empirical research on the police in this part of the world, however, is scarce. The research project analyses the autonomy of police institutions at the level of everyday police practices. West African police work in an environment of low legitimacy is faced with competing non-state policing organisations and depends on superordinate or coordinate state institutions. Police practices have adapted to these conditions and therefore have come to terms with permanent informal interference by non-police actors, in some cases using the situation to their advantage by outsourcing certain police tasks. Despite these adaptations, policemen still aim to partially preserve the autonomy of their institution.

The project analyses this ambivalent boundary work in which police and civil actors constantly adjust, redraw or preserve the boundary distinguishing them in everyday interactions. A comparison of policemen's boundary work in two quite different countries, such as Ghana (anglophone, stable democracy since 1992) and Niger (francophone, presently authoritarian), permits researchers to analyse how historical and political contexts shape police practices. The comparative approach allows researchers to elaborate on collectively shared practices and to contribute to empirical and theoretical research on the state in Africa.

In the year 2010, as many as seventeen African states celebrated their independence jubilees. The research group has taken these events as invitation to explore the politics and poetics of commemoration in a comparative perspective. The debates surrounding their organisation, the imagery and performances they employ, reflected the fault lines with which African nation-building has to contend, such as competing political orientations, issues of social class and gender, and religious, regional and ethnic diversity. At the same time, the celebrations in themselves represented constitutive and cathartic moments of nation-building, aiming to enhance citizens' emotional attachments to the country, and inviting to remember, re-enact and re-define national history. Since October 2009, comparative research has been conducted on the golden jubilees of independence in Burkina Faso, Côte d'Ivoire, Gabon, Cameroon, and Madagascar, as well as on the 20th anniversary of independence of Namibia. In close cooperation with the doctoral research group, a group of nine Masters students, supervised by Carola Lentz, conducted fieldwork on the independence celebrations in Benin, the Democratic Republic of Congo, Madagascar, Mali, and Nigeria. A collectively designed research programme provided the basis for comparative insights into African national memory at work. This was supplemented by the focus areas that emerged from the doctoral researchers' individual field research projects.

Mareike Späth focuses on cultural nationalism and the way the Malagasy celebrated the independence jubilee in the private sphere. She explored how Madagascar's national holiday, and particularly the golden jubilee of independence, contributed to building the Malagasy nation, and how the political celebration has been appropriated and re-interpreted by broader segments of the population.

Christine Fricke and Konstanze N'Guessan both explore the politics of remembering, history-telling and historical forgetting in Gabon and Côte d'Ivoire. In Gabon, the political changes caused by the death of President Omar Bongo Odimba in 2009, who was considered to be a symbol of national unity, and the controversial succession of his son Ali Ben Bongo, constituted remarkable challenges for the politics of remembering. Christine Fricke looks at the celebrations as a cathartic and controversial moment of collective remembering, societal integration and political legitimisation as well as the (re)production and negotiation of divergent national self-perceptions. Although in Côte d'Ivoire, the death of the nation's founding father, Félix Houphouët-Boigny, already occurred in 1993, a new generation of Ivorian politicians was and still continues to be grappling to find an appropriate way to deal with his legacy. This included heated debates about who had the right to call himself heir to Houphouët-Boigny. Furthermore, not only the heritage of the founding father, but the very history of independence itself was contested. Konstanze N'Guessan analyses history/ies of independence as lieux de mémoire of the Ivorian nation that link individual lives to the nation's destiny.

In the Namibian case, too, the 20th anniversary of independence provoked political debates about the 'ownership' of the liberation struggle's martyrs and veterans – the focus of Godwin Kornes' research project. He looks at processes of nation-building in Namibia from a broader perspective, analysing not only national days but also national monuments and the national museum as central elements of the (re)construction of national memory.

Svenja Haberecht and Kathrin Tiewa both focus on the tensions between official commemorative events and unofficial practices of remembering. In both cases, the cinquanteenaire festivities were closely linked to presidential elections: In Burkina Faso, Blaise Compaoré had just been re-elected as president, while in Cameroon, the independence celebrations were used as kick-off for the electoral campaign. Svenja Haberecht pays particular attention to the negotiation of a 'collective memory' among various political parties, labour unions and civil society initiatives as well as the (re-) production of national identity in the context of the Independence Day celebrations. Kathrin Tiewa explores the question to which degree the celebrations actually foster unity or rather emphasise differences.

In the course of 2011, in addition to giving individual papers at various conferences, members of the doctoral research group collectively presented first results of their fieldwork at the 4th European Conference on African Studies in Uppsala/Sweden, at a colloquium of the study of memory cultures in Konstanz, and at the 54th Annual Meeting of the African Studies Association in Washington, D.C. Furthermore, the group published a collective volume that contains results from the Ph.D. researchers' as well as the Masters students' field work:

- Lentz, Carola and Godwin Kornes (eds.) (2011), Staatsinszenierung, Erinnerungs marathon und Volksfest. Afrika feiert 50 Jahre Unabhängigkeit. (Wissen und Praxis, 166) Frankfurt/Main: Brandes und Apsel.

Furthermore, as in the previous year, the group repeatedly presented the project to the wider public. During the Wissenschaftsmarkt (see chapter "Activities"), numerous photos as well as objects collected during the various independence celebrations were displayed. Carola Lentz gave an in-depth interview to Alf Mentzer from HR2 on the independence jubilees in the context of a topical focus on "Pfingsten: Feste, Feiern, Rituale", 12th June 2011.

The Adamawa language family covers 80-90 languages scattered over a large area in Central Africa explicitly in Nigeria, Cameroon, the Central African Republic, and Chad. 40-60 languages of these are spoken in Cameroon, most of which are among the least studied languages of Africa.

The first stage of the project was predominantly dedicated to the study and description (based on a functional-typological approach) of four individual languages of the Samba-Duru-Branch of Central Adamawa. For two of these, previous studies (mainly pedagogical material and grammars) were available, namely for Fali (Raija Kramer) and for Pere (Raimund Kastenholz). On that basis, intensive field research in grammar and lexicon was designed and carried out. In the other two cases, Kolbila (Sabine Littig), and Longto/Voko (Ulrich Kleinewillinghöfer), research into and analysis of structures and functions of the relevant languages had to be taken from the very beginning. During the second stage research focused on more specific topics in a number of hitherto completely undocumented languages of the Samba-Duru-Group. In particular languages of the Vere-Gimme ('Koma' languages) and Dii Subgroups. A language survey on roughly ten languages was carried out. Individual studies comprise the verbal system (Sabine Littig: Sama and Vere-Gimme languages), noun-class systems (Ulrich Kleinewillinghöfer: Sama and Vere-Gimme languages), and property concepts (Marlene Bockelmann: Dii).

The project provides for the continuation of the description of undocumented languages of the contiguous area in and around the Alantika Mountains straddling the border between Cameroon (Northern Region) and Nigeria (Adamawa State) in order to fill a gap in language documentation of Adamawa languages.

The denominational health system in Burkina Faso. Collaboration and conflict with the public health system

Project director: Katrin Langewiesche

<http://www.ifeas.uni-mainz.de/projekte/GesundheitBurkinaFaso.html>

This research project analyses the current involvement of the different religious communities in the health care system in Burkina Faso from a diachronic perspective. As is the case in many other African countries, in Burkina Faso the state relies on the intensive involvement of religious actors to provide the population with high quality health care in their immediate locality. It is a well-known fact that denominational health care, which has played the role of a stop-gap solution to the deficiencies of the public health system since independence, has been assuming an increasingly important position in the African health landscape. Yet, little research has been carried out on this phenomenon.

The project is not limited to the analysis of one religious community but analyses the two 'great' religions side by side. Burkina Faso provides an interesting research area for such a study which does not adapt to the usual idea of a Christian-Muslim discordance. The society is predominantly Muslim while the health care system is embossed by the presence of Christian organisations. The aim of this project is to explore why and how this encounter functions relatively peacefully, which co-operations and divisions of labour in the health care system are developed between the religious institutions and the state, and the impact of this religious plurality on the society. Therefore, urban and rural research areas have been selected in which the different religious communities manage and complete health centres and other health care offers.

Caricature of Timpous. Source: Exhibition, Goethe Institute, Ouagadougou, May 2010.

In view of its location at the intersection of the sociology of health, religious anthropology and the historical sciences, the analysis of the denominational health sector necessitates an interdisciplinary approach. The comparative and diachronic approach of this project has the ambition to avoid the limitation to one religion and to focus on the interaction of the different religions with each other and with the public institutions. This project develops a particular perspective on religion as service delivery institution.

The negotiation of culture: video films and Bongo Flava music in Tanzania

Swahili video films and Bongo Flava music are two genres of Tanzanian popular culture that have emerged during the past decade. Focusing on the content as well as on the modes of production, distribution and consumption of video films, music and music videos, the project intends to contribute to the growing body of critical studies on African popular culture. Our findings suggest the emergence of a veritable ‘neoliberal culture industry’ in Tanzania within the past decade. Built around a handful of powerful distribution companies, radio stations, and TV channels, this ‘industry’ relies on content produced by musicians, artists, and drama companies at their own cost. While video filmmakers, organised in small groups, or drama companies, have successfully defended their right to sell their products to the distributors for dissemination, most musicians are less fortunate and have to pay gatekeepers at radio or TV stations in order to get their music aired or their music videos broadcasted. Since music television has recently replaced radio as the most important medium of distribution, it has become difficult for musicians to disseminate their art. High production costs for the more and more indispensable music videos add to their economic problems. Thus, they have to rely on live performances either sponsored by political parties, commercial companies, or development agencies to generate income. Postponing making a living through music to the future, many musicians thrive on their public role as mouthpieces of the common people, with the task to mediate and negotiate current social and cultural issues through their art. While this conceptualisation of the artist is rooted in the cultural politics of Tanzania’s early socialist years, its recent reformulations have not only become very explicit in political terms, but also turned musicians into politicians themselves (such as ‘Sugu’ who successfully contested for a seat in parliament in 2010). Thus, Tanzania’s neoliberal culture industry does not necessarily prevent the mass-mediation of critical content, even though it is reluctant to pay the artists who produce it.

A matter of life and death? Religious encounters in Madagascar and the differentiation of modernity

Project director: Eva Spies

Duration: November 2010 – April 2011

Funded by a grant from the Forschungsfonds (internal research promotion) of the JGU.

Researchers as well as missionaries used to conceive Christianity as the religion of the ‘modern West’ that has to deal with local ‘African traditions’. Today when Christianity in Africa could be seen as a local tradition, many African Christians still associate Christianity with modernity. But since the diversity of Christian denominations in Africa has been increasing and especially the number of Pentecostal churches has been rising, African Christians are confronted with a variety of ‘African Christianities’ and thus with different visions of modern Christian life.

The research project aims at understanding the ways in which these Christianities are lived and practiced in contemporary Madagascar. It analyses how Christian actors in the highland of Madagascar deal with the experience of religious diversity and particularly with inner-Christian encounters between established forms of Christianity on the one hand and newer forms of Pentecostal Christianity arriving from the African continent on the other. The project seeks to analyse how the actors of this kind of South-South relation deal with ‘the other’, and which notions of ‘religion’, ‘modernity’ and ‘tradition’ are relevant to them in this process.

To study the dynamics of religious encounters and to exemplify these notions ethnographically, the research focuses on ideas and practices concerning life, death, and personhood of members of the Reformed, the Catholic and of a Nigerian Pentecostal Church in Madagascar.

In the context of this research project a group of five students conducted fieldwork on “Contemporary Christianities in Madagascar” in the capital Antananarivo from August till October 2010. They were supervised by Eva Spies.

ACTIVITIES

EVENTS ORGANISED BY INDIVIDUAL STAFF MEMBERS

Hauke Dorsch supervised two SHOWCASE DISPLAYS on PERFORMANCES OF AFRICAN AND WESTERN MUSICIANS ON NELSON MANDELA'S 70TH BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION designed by students as part of the seminar course "Reggae, Rumba, Rock and Rap – Western music in Africa and African music in the West" and one showcase display on WORLD MUSIC AND EXOTISM designed by a student as part of the seminar course "African and World Music – Postcolonial Perspectives", which were presented in the lobby of the department in the winter semester of 2010/11 and the summer semester of 2011 respectively.

The flyer for "Das AMA stellt sich vor", designed by Janika Herz, a student assistant in the AMA.

Hauke Dorsch, supported by Aida Binger, Janika Herz, Stefanie Jeschke, Martha Kandziora, Hannah Koromah, Andreas Kreiner-Wolf, Sven Mietzsch, Maria Neuteufel, Cornelia Steudner, and other students, organised a series of events called DAS AMA STELLT SICH VOR, which took place from 4th – 20th February 2011. These events included an exhibition of record covers with five different subjects, including South African political issues, an overview of different Togolese styles, the variety of Manding music, the stars of Senegalese Hip Hop and finally some covers solely chosen for the quality of their artwork. The exhibition was opened by a concert of the Gambian griots Aziz Kuyateh, Karamo Kuyateh and Pa Jobarteh on 4th February 2011. Furthermore, the series included the launching of Sven Mietzsch's image clip for the AMA, a talk by Andreas Kreiner-Wolf on South African music on 7th February 2011, and a talk by Hauke Dorsch on the Scorsese film "Feel Like Going Home" on 10th February 2011.

In her function as curator of the Ethnographic collection, Anna-Maria Brandstetter coordinated the presentation of items in the context of WUNDERKAMMER, an installation realised by M.A. students from the University of Applied Sciences, Mainz, as part of the project "skop: Kommunikationslabor für Wissenschaft und Gestaltung" (14th April – 30th June 2011). Two other skop projects – "Archives and Collections" (a photo exhibition) and "Graphic Abstracts" (an edition of ten posters about scientific finds) – were realised in cooperation with the collection's curator (skop.gutenberg-intermedia. de).

Together with Mamadou Diawara (Frankfurt), Ute Röschenharter organised an international conference on INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY, NORMATIVE ORDERS AND GLOBALISATION (part 2) at the Forschungskolleg Bad Homburg, 2nd – 4th June 2011 (funded by the Cluster of Excellence 243, "The Formation of Normative Orders", and the Centre for Interdisciplinary African Studies, Goethe University Frankfurt).

With an exhibition as well as several staged events on INDEPENDENCE CHA-CHA – AFRIKA FEIERT 50 JAHRE UNABHÄNGIGKEIT / AFRIKA CELEBRATES 50 YEARS OF INDEPENDENCE, the Department of Anthropology and African Studies, including the African Music Archives, contributed to the 10TH MAINZER WISSENSCHAFTSMARKT, 4th – 5th June 2011. The exhibition was prepared by Carola Lentz and Mareike Späth together with students of the seminar course “Ausstellungsseminar Unabhängigkeitfeiern”.

The displays were based on materials collected by fifteen student researchers who had observed and documented the 50th independence celebrations in nine African countries in 2010. The public was invited to a journey to African independence jubilees: via headphones, visitors enjoyed audio materials such as jubilee speeches and anthems; the displays included photos of military parades and other popular mass events of the 50th independence celebrations as well a broad array of objects such as jubilee paraphernalia.

In a special program, children could design their own flag and get a mock-portrait, disguised as a head of state. Other activities included a quiz on African states.

Also at the Wissenschaftsmarkt, Hauke Dorsch presented African music of the independence years, of African liberation movements and of the independence jubilees. Together with Celine Molter (Mainz) and Mareike Späth (Mainz), he organised a concert of Malagasy musicians with Olombelo Ricky and his band, which was the final highlight of the Wissenschaftsmarkt.

Carola Lentz, together with Jan Beek and Mirco Göpfert, presented the project BOUNDARY WORK – POLICE IN WEST AFRICA to the wider public on the JGU's "Tag der Forschung" on 8th June 2011. They displayed a poster about their research methods and answered questions of the wider public.

EXCURSIONS AND STUDENT FIELD RESEARCH

Anja Oed organised an excursion to the exhibition AFROPOLIS. STADT, MEDIEN, KUNST at the Rautenstrauch Joest Museum in Cologne on 27th January 2011. The group of nine students and six colleagues received a guided tour by Larissa Förster (Cologne), one of the curators of the exhibition. After some time to explore the exhibition individually, the group attended a lecture by Matthias Krings (Mainz) on "Mit Speer in der Stadt. Afrikanische Moderne im Fotoroman der 1960er Jahre", which was part of the exhibition-related programme.

From May until October 2011 a group of eleven Magister students, supervised by Hauke Dorsch, did field research on THE REPRESENTATION OF AFRICA ON MUSIC FESTIVALS in a number of cities and towns in Germany (and additionally in Austria, Switzerland, Spain and Morocco). Research focused on references to Africa, either performed on stage, used in catering or in marketing activities. Eleven students attended 22 festivals, thirteen of these in Germany between May and October

Performance at the Alafia African Festival Hamburg, August 2011

2011. Most of the festivals referred to Africa explicitly (i.e., in the festival's name), others included implicit references to Africa (reggae, hiphop and gnawa festivals). Methods used included participant observation, interviews, questionnaires, analyses of performances and visual (iconic) representations. This research project serves as a preparatory study for a larger international research project which will focus on music festivals in Africa. It is supported by the Zentrum für Interkulturelle Studien (ZIS).

Katrin Langewiesche coordinated a group of students at the University of Ouagadougou, Department of History and Sociology, on denominational health care in Burkina Faso. The students' research projects focused on THE CHARACTERISTICS OF MUSLIM AND CHRISTIAN HEALTH INSTITUTIONS IN DEDOUGOU, OUAGADOUGOU AND BOBO-DIOULASSO.

During the winter semester of 2011/12 the newly founded GUTENBERG TEACHING COUNCIL (Gutenberg Lehrkolleg), designed to improve the quality of teaching at the JGU, has commenced its service. Amongst other activities the Gutenberg Teaching Council invites applications for innovative teaching projects from all departments and across all disciplines. Every semester two external scholars are selected to take up the position of a VISITING TEACHING PROFESSOR at the JGU that lasts up to six months. One of the first two to be chosen was Berlin-based Cultural Anthropologist and filmmaker Thorolf Lipp. He is giving a series of three courses at the department which, in theory and practice, circle around the question of how culture can be represented with audiovisual means. The final result of the project will be a Multimedia Mind Map, a comprehensive online platform that will deal with the history and theory of the interview in the nonfictional film. The platform is supposed to be up and running by the beginning of the summer semester of 2012.

TEACHING AND RESEARCH PARTNERSHIPS

The department is a member of the AFRICA-EUROPE GROUP FOR INTERDISCIPLINARY STUDIES (AEGIS), <http://www.aegis-eu.org>).

Within Germany, the department is actively involved in the VEREINIGUNG FÜR AFRIKAWISSENSCHAFTEN IN DEUTSCHLAND (VAD), German Association for African Studies, <http://www.vad-ev.de>) as well as the DEUTSCHE GESELLSCHAFT FÜR VÖLKERKUNDE (DGV), German Anthropological Association GAA, <http://www.dgv-net.de>). In September 2011, several members of the department were elected to the Board of Directors of the German Anthropological Association (GAA – Deutsche Gesellschaft für Völkerkunde, DGV). Carola Lentz was elected President, Matthias Krings was elected Vice-President, and Ute Röschenthaler was elected Treasurer of the GAA. The members of the Board of Directors function as convenors of the next biennial conference of the GAA, which will take place in October 2013. Anna-Maria Brandstetter, Hauke Dorsch and Eva Spies constitute the Advisory Board of the GAA; Silja Thomas is administrator of the GAA.

Within the JGU, the department co-operates with colleagues in other departments and faculties in the context of

- the PH.D. PROGRAMME “AUDIOVISUELLE KOMMUNIKATION ALS WISSENSCHAFTLICHE METHODE SOZIAL- UND KULTURWISSENSCHAFTLICHER DISziPLINEN” (Audiovisual communication as a method in social and cultural studies)
- the RESEARCH CENTRE “SOZIAL- UND KULTURWISSENSCHAFTEN” (SOCUM), Social and Cultural Studies Mainz, <http://www.uni-mainz.de/forschung/25600.php>)
- the CENTER FOR INTERCULTURAL STUDIES (ZIS), <http://www.zis.uni-mainz.de>)
- the INTERDISziPLINÄRER ARBEITSKREIS MEDIENWISSENSCHAFTEN
- the INTERNATIONAL PH.D. PROGRAMME “PERFORMANCE AND MEDIA STUDIES” (http://www.performedia.uni-mainz.de/index\_ENG.php)
- the INTERDISziPLINÄRER ARBEITSKREIS DRITTE WELT

The NATIONAL UNIVERSITY OF RWANDA in Butare and the University of Mainz have cooperated closely since 1982. In June 2011, Anna-Maria Brandstetter was appointed coordinator of the university partnership. The Department of Anthropology and African Studies has a close cooperation with the Department of Social Sciences of the Faculty of Arts, Media and Social Sciences.

The department cooperates with the Department of Linguistics of the UNIVERSITY OF BUEA, Cameroon, in carrying out research on Cameroonian languages. Coordinator: Raimund Kastenholz.

The department maintains close contacts with anthropologists and sociologists at the LABORATOIRE D’ETUDES ET DE RECHERCHES SUR LES DYNAMIQUES SOCIALES (LASDEL; NIAMEY/NIGER AND PARAKOU/BENIN, see <http://www.lasdel.net>), the UNIVERSITÉ NATIONALE DE BÉNIN (UNB) IN COTONOU and the UNIVERSITÉ DE PARAKOU (BÉNIN), with whom researchers from our own department are collaborating on a number of research projects. Many of these joint research projects also involve students from Benin. Coordination: Thomas Bierschenk.

In 1999 the department and the School of Social Sciences and Humanities, UNIVERSITY OF PORT ELIZABETH (UPE), SOUTH AFRICA entered into a cooperative agreement facilitating the exchange of students and staff as well as the planning and execution of joint research projects.

There are close contacts between the department and the EURO-AFRICAN ASSOCIATION FOR THE ANTHROPOLOGY OF SOCIAL CHANGE AND DEVELOPMENT (APAD), (<http://www.association-apad.org>). APAD is a network promoting dialogue between African and European researchers in the social sciences as well as with development agents. Initially devoted to the empirical studies of interactions brought about by development, APAD's approach has evolved towards research regarding social change on the African continent in its broadest sense.

There are close cooperations between anthropologists in MARSEILLE (ÉCOLE DES HAUTES ÉTUDES EN SCIENCES SOCIALES – EHESS), AIX-EN-PROVENCE, MONTPELLIER (ORSTOM, CNEARC), LOUVAIN-LA-NEUVE, BRUSSELS, LEUVEN, UPPSALA, ROSKILDE. Biennially, an international francophone postgraduate colloquium (école doctorale) is held. Coordination: Thomas Bierschenk.

The department also participates in the EUROPEAN EXCHANGE PROGRAMME ERASMUS and has established bilateral agreements with the following universities throughout Europe (<http://www.ifeas.uni-mainz.de/info/Auslandstudium.html>):

STUDENT STATISTICS

In the winter semester of 2011/2012, the Department of Anthropology and African Studies had 938 students. Of these, 427 students were studying Anthropology (Ethnologie, Magister Artium), 64 students were studying African Language Studies (Afrikanische Philologie, Magister Artium), and 427 students were enrolled for the B.A. in Anthropology and African Studies (Ethnologie und Afrikastudien).

Of the 427 students of Anthropology (Magister), 211 were studying Anthropology as their major subject (Hauptfach) while 222 were studying it as one of their minor subjects (Nebenfächer). Of the 64 students of African Language Studies (Magister), 14 were studying African Language Studies as their major subject, while 50 were studying it as one of their minor subjects. Additionally, 20 students were officially enrolled for a Ph.D. (Dr. phil.) at the department in 2011.

Of the 427 students enrolled in the B.A. in Anthropology and African Studies in the winter semester of 2011/2012, 235 were studying it as their major subject (Kernfach) while 192 were studying it as their minor subject (Beifach). In the summer semester of 2011, 71 B.A. students were enrolled in their first semester (31 with Anthropology and African Studies as their major and 40 with Anthropology and African Studies as a minor). In the winter semester of 2011/2012, 144 B.A. students were enrolled in their first semester (72 with Anthropology and African Studies as their major and 72 with Anthropology and African Studies as a minor).

In the winter semester of 2011/12, the B.A. programme in Anthropology and African Studies was complemented with a new M.A. programme, which will gradually replace the old Magister curriculum. The new M.A. programme, like the old Magister curriculum, provides a solid grounding in Social and Cultural Anthropology. Students studying for this degree should be able to pursue professional careers in development work, broadcasting and the media, journalism and publishing, public relations, social services and other fields, or to pursue careers in teaching and research in university and museum settings.

The total number of students in the department has remained constant. While the number of students of Anthropology (Magister) and African Language Studies (Magister) is continuously decreasing, as it is no longer possible to enrol in these programmes and the old Magister students are gradually completing their studies, the number of B.A. students has significantly grown. It is expected that in the future, as the number of B.A. graduates increases, students will begin to enrol in the new M.A. programme.
